Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO reviewed the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) assessment of the: (1) risk posed to birds by agricultural uses of granular carbofuran, including sorghum uses; and (2) economic impacts on growers of cancelling sorghum uses of granular carbofuran. GAO noted that: (1) comparative risk indices developed by EPA indicate that granular carbofuran is more toxic to birds than alternative pesticides; (2) birds are likely to be exposed to carbofuran granules as a result of normal agricultural activity and the birds foraging patterns; (3) instead of assessing the risk to bird populations, EPA based its conclusions on the risk posed to individual birds; (4) granular carbofuran and its principal alternatives present similar acute human health concerns, but some alternatives also present chronic human health concerns; (5) the cost to growers of cancelling sorghum uses of granular carbofuran is estimated to be 2.6 million to 10.7 million annually because of increased production costs and yield losses; (6) cancelling sorghum uses of granular carbofuran may cause significant impacts in sorghum-growing areas that experience high infestations of pests; and...
