There are two remarkable verses in Romans v. which employ this word receive, and which hold the key of the richest, deepest, and most blessed life. The one tells us that we should receive the at-one-ment, and the other that we should receive the abundance of Gods grace and reign in this mortal life as we hope one day to reign in the eternal life of heaven. We must not only ask, but receive; we must pass from seeking to finding; we must never leave the door till it has been opened to us. There is a difference between supplication or entreaty and this attitude of our spirit. In the former we implore God to give us what we suppose can only be gained by the urgency of our entreaty; in the latter we take what, before we asked, God had placed within...
