Excerpt: .to-morrow, or Bluebell to-day and Bonny Bess to-morrow, when at every crunching of wheels in the drive I turn hot and cold by turns; when at every ring of the door-bell I lose all control over my shaking voice; and when even the sight of the postman makes the end of my sentences fly out of my head? Wouldn't you like to go away for a week or two? asks Frances, one morning when I am pulling my needle idly through a piece of embroidery, having been even more restless than usual since breakfast, wandering aimlessly from room to room, from my writing-table to the piano, and from the piano to the conservatory, where I have plucked half a dozen flowers and then carelessly thrown them aside. I drop my work and stare angrily at Frances. I am very tenacious of my dignity just now, and have not mentioned Allan's name since the day I met Mrs. Stuart. Go away! I repeat severely. Why should I want to go away from home? You are not looking at all well, and I think you want a change, returns my sister boldly. A change, when we have been roaming for months! My dear Frances, I think it is a rest and not a change I want. It would be so nice to have a week or two in town and do the plays, says Frances coaxingly. Do ask Bryan to take us up. This...
